Thank you for your interest in Harvard Book Store. Because any employment choice is important, we'll give you some basic information about working here to help you make an informed decision.

- We rarely hire part-time or temporary staff. Not “never,” but rarely.
- Full-time work is 40 hours a week.
- Each individual’s schedule varies from week to week and regularly includes evening and weekend shifts.
- We are closed only on Thanksgiving Day and Christmas Day.
- Starting pay is currently $16.00 an hour.

We’re an equal opportunity employer and welcome all applicants regardless of ethnicity, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, veteran, or disability status.

The work is detailed and physically demanding. On the sales floor, responsibilities include customer service, shelving and section maintenance, and cashiering. A willingness to be friendly, respectful, and actively helpful is called for at all hours. Staff can spend up to 8 hours on our feet at a stretch, and the daily routine includes climbing stairs and ladders while carrying up to 25 pounds. There is a paid 60-day probationary period. Post-probationary staff are invited to join the staff’s union, affiliated with the United Auto Workers.

Benefits include discounts, book borrowing, paid sick days and holidays, vacation and personal days based on the length of employment, health and disability insurance, and a profit sharing plan.

Other benefits, less tangible if obvious to book lovers, are likely what brought you to the store in the first place. It can be highly rewarding to match a book to a reader in an atmosphere that encourages inclusion, broad thinking, and freedom of expression.

If you feel you can fill the requirements at the payscale offered and find some personal satisfaction working at Harvard Book Store, we encourage you to fill out our application and return it to the Information Desk. Thanks again for your interest in the Store, and for your care and attention in filling out our application.

Please fill out the entire application even if you are attaching a resume.
